

German MBA Conference 2006 “Investing in Germany – better than its reputation?”

After three success stories in previous years, the German MBA Conference is held in its fourth edition this year in New York from the 17th to the 19th of November.

The Conference brings together German speaking MBA and PhD students of leading US graduate schools and provides a platform for discussion on current significant topics in Germany with top figures of business, politics and science. Furthermore it lets conference participants get to know each other and form long-lasting ties. As another major aspect the conference encourages the dialogue between sponsoring companies and students regarding job opportunities for internships and permanent positions.

This year, the conference will be held at the Columbia Business School, New York. The discussions address the attractiveness of Germany for major enterprises and financial sponsors.

In the previous three years, more than 300 enthused students from renown US universities have attended the exciting presentations of German and international business leaders at the Chicago Business School, the Harvard Business School and the Wharton School. Last year's events were sponsored by Apax, A.T. Kearney, The Boston Consulting Group, Degussa, Deutsche Post WorldNet / DHL, Goldman Sachs, Lehman Brothers, Lufthansa Cargo, Merrill Lynch, McKinsey & Company, SAP and Siemens.

We are looking forward to your contribution to this event!

Your German MBA Conference 2006 Team:

K. Christian Kallen (Columbia 07),
Daniel Rahm (NYU Stern 07),
Christian Stolz (Columbia 07),
Philip von Wulffen (Columbia 07)

E-mail: info@germanmbaconference.org
Internet: www.aermanmbaconference.org

